President's Action Puts Republican Factions Apart.

CORTELYOU HELD BLAMELESS

Roosevelt Himself Blamed for Allowing Double Dealing in South. Opposition to Hughes Expected to Improve Governor's Chances-Loch Still Bears Brunt of Fight, Too.

After Thursday's storm of sensational rumor, following President Roosevelt's repetition of this third term renunciation, political observers in Washington breathed more freely and considered things in a calmer spirit yesterday.

Those curious ones who found excuse to be at the White House at the hour appointed for the regular Cabinet meeting saw the Secretary of the Treasury enter the Cabinet room in his usual calm and unruffled way. If anybody thought that the relations between President Roosevelt and Secretary Cortelyou were such that they could not meet face to face at the President's council table, or that Mr. Cortelyou would be afraid to mingle with his Cabinet associates, he found himself

Not for an instant has Mr. Cortelyou indicated that he put any faith in the reports that President Roosevelt was angry with him. There is not the slightest evidence that Mr. Roosevelt has said one unkind word about Mr. Cortelyou. On hand that the sudden announcement by the President that he was definitely out of dent, it is contended, has not helped the cause of the Roosevelt policies by the enuragement which he is seeking to give to the candidacy of Secretary Taft. On the contrary, it is held he has alienated some of his best friends, who would naturally have come to his support had his course been otherwise

There is no reason to doubt that the President knew that Federal officeholders were working in his behalf; knew it, in fact, long before he issued his order to heads of departments to forbid such gations to the Republican national comvention instructed for Roosevelt.

There is every reason to believe that n spite of the injudicious utterances of partisans of Taft, some of whom are in very close touch with the White House, that Secretary Cortelyou has bee the President's name to help Mr. Cortelyou's own candidacy, the President has been fully aware all along of what was being done by politicians who are accounted as Cortelyou men, and that he showed no sign of disapproval.

Loeb Gets the Blame. On the other hand, there is no evidence whatever implicating Mr. Cortelyou in any movement to help his own candidacy under cover of an attempt to create Roosevelt sentiment. Mr. Cortelyou's friends say that he is conscious of having done nothing that could be construed in any way, even remotely, as disloyal to President Roosevelt, and they are inclined Funeral of the Late Mr. Lansdale, a Veteran Printer.

The body of Edward N. Lansdale, who died Thursday night in his apartments at 333 Missouri avenue, from a stroke of paralysis, will be interred in the family plot at Rock Creek Cemetery, after funeral services at Lee's Chapel, in Pennsylvania avenue, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The pallbearers will be members of Columbia Typographical Union, of which the deceased was a member.

Mr. Lansdale, who was about sixtyeight years old, served in the Union army in the civil war. He was among the veteran printers of Washington, and has frequently been employed as a compositor at the establishment of McGill & Wal-lace. Although a resident of this city since the close of the civil war, he was quiet, and little is known of his military
